NAMI is part of OpenMindsOpenDoors, a Pennsylvania initiative aimed at ending discrimination against people who have mental illnesses. The campaign seeks to educate people about mental illnesses; to foster tolerance among peers, employers, educators, communities, and families; and to advocate for the legal rights of people living with psychiatric disabilities. The campaign is supported by dozens of mental health organizations and businesses across the state.

Your name matters.

By adding your name and that of your company below you join thousands of organizations and individuals across Pennsylvania (and beyond) that believe discrimination against people who have mental illnesses is wrong.

For questions about this campaign please don't hesitate to contact info@openmindsopendoors.com,

I believe:

- ❖ People living with mental illnesses have the same needs as everyone else.
- ❖ People with mental illnesses do recover and live productive lives.
- ❖ People who have mental illnesses make valuable contributions to society.
- ❖ Discrimination against people who have mental illnesses keeps them from seeking help.
- ❖ Discrimination against people who have mental illnesses violates their basic human rights.
